If there's a single common element that ties all action movies together, it's a universal preference for movement over dialogue or character development. Action movies revolve around action sequences. Very often, interludes of dialogue or plot development exist to link one action sequence with the next. The fast-paced sequences are the audience's pay off for going along for the ride.Action movies have always been a popular genre. They reached a pinnacle of box-office supremacy in the 1980s. The careers of some of the industry's biggest names were built on the success of action movie franchises. Sylvester Stallone turned his Rocky and Rambo movies into lengthy career. Arnold Schwarzenegger built a political career on the Terminator or Conan the Barbarian films. Bruce Willis, Tom Cruise and a host of other superstars have the action movie genre to thank for their livelihoods.Action movies online are commonly part of the crime or military thriller genres. They can fall into other genres as long as the action in their story lines trumps inaction. © 1996-2015, Amazon.com, Inc. or its affiliates Scroll To See More Images It's been two decades since the first Fast and Furious movie came out, but fans still want more. With nine films and one spinoff, it's understandable why movie lovers want to know how to watch The Fast and Furious movies online for free to catch the whole saga from start to finish. The Fast and Furious franchise—known as The Fast Saga—started in 2001 with the release of the first movie, The Fast and the Furious. The film was inspired by a 1998 Vibe magazine article titled "Racer X," which detailed an illegal street racing circuit in New York City. After director Rob Cohen read the article, he presented a script to Universal Studios and the Fast and Furious franchise was born. The first movie followed an undercover cop named Brian O'Conner (Paul Walker) who was tasked with discovering the identities of a group of unknown automobile hijackers led by Dominic Toretto (Vin Diesel.) Though originally planned as the trilogy, the Fast and Furious franchise has led to nine movies and one spinoff, with a final tenth on the way. What started as movies about illegal street racers, The Fast Saga has transitioned into blockbuster actions films about heists and spies. With hundreds of millions of dollars made at the box office, there's no doubt that the Fast and Furious franchise is a household name. Now it's time to watch the Fast and Furious movies online for free, whether you're a die-hard fan of the franchise or a newcomer who wants to join the fun. The franchise also includes short films, a television series, live shows, toys, video games and theme park attractions. It is distributed by Universal Studios. The first film was released in 2001, which began the original tetralogy of films focused on street racing and culminated in the film Fast & Furious (2009). The series transitioned away from street racing and spying with Fast Five (2011) and was followed by five sequels, with the most recent, Fast 2, set for release in 2023, is the final film that will conclude the series. The main films are collectively known as The Fast Saga. Universal expanded the series to include the spin-off film Fast & Furious Presents: Hobbs & Shaw (2019), while its subsidiary DreamWorks Animation followed this with the animated streaming television series Fast & Furious Spy Racers. Soundtrack albums have been released for all the films, as well as compilation albums containing existing music heard in the films. Two short films that tie into the series have also been released. The series has been commercially successful; Universal's biggest franchise, it is the eighth highest-grossing film series, with a combined gross of over $6 billion.[1] Critical reception for the first four films were mixed to negative until the fifth and later films, where more were mixed to positively received. Outside of the films, Fast & Furious has been the focus of other media, including attractions at Universal Studios Hollywood and Universal Studios Florida, live shows, commercials, many video games and toys. It is considered the vehicle that propelled lead actors Vin Diesel and Paul Walker to stardom.[2] Films The Fast Saga Film U.S. release date Director(s) Screenwriter(s) Story by Producer(s) The Fast and the Furious June 22, 2001 (2001-06-22) Rob Cohen Gary Scott Thompson, Erik Bergquist &David Ayer Gary Scott Thompson Neal H. Garcia confirmed unresolved plot-points would be expanded upon in the next film.[12] By March 2020, Johnson confirmed that a sequel was in active development, though a screenwriter and director had not yet been hired.[13] Over the next two months, producers Johnson and Hiram Garcia confirmed that the project was officially in development. Chris Morgan will once again serve as screenwriter, with a plot that includes various new characters written to be introduced in the sequel.[14][15][16] In November 2021, Johnson revealed that he had developed an original idea for the sequel, which he described as "the antithesis of Fast & Furious" and that he had presented the concept to Universal Pictures chairwoman Donna Langley, Seven Bucks President Hiram Garcia, and screenwriter Chris Morgan. He elaborated that he looks for projects that have qualities referred to as the "Moses Effect", explaining the project must be both "ambitious" and "grounded".[17] In December, after Vin Diesel called for Johnson to reprise his role in Fast X (2023), Johnson stated that there was "no chance" that he would return to the mainline Fast & Furious films.[19] Short films Film U.S. release date Director(s) Screenwriter(s) Story by Producer(s) The Turbo Charged Prelude for 2 Fast 2 Furious June 3, 2003 (2003-06-03) Philip G. It is the sequel to The Fast and the Furious (2001), is the second installment in the Fast & Furious franchise, and stars Paul Walker as Brian O'Conner alongside Tyrese Gibson and Eva Mendes. In the film, ex-LAPD officer Brian O'Conner and his friend Roman Pearce (Gibson) go undercover for the U.S. Customs Service to apprehend a drug lord in exchange for the erasure of their criminal records. A second Fast & Furious film was planned immediately after the theatrical release of its predecessor in 2001,[4] and was confirmed with the returns of Walker and producer Neal H. Moritz. Vin Diesel and Rob Cohen, the co-star and director of the first film, were unable to return; Gibson and Singleton joined the cast in their absence in 2002. To canonically account for Diesel's departure, the short film The Turbo Charged Prelude for 2 Fast 2 Furious (2003) was produced and released. Principal photography for 2 Fast 2 Furious commenced in September 2002 and lasted until that December, with filming locations including Miami and the surrounding areas in southern Florida.[5][6] 2 Fast 2 Furious premiered at the Universal Amphitheatre on June 3, 2003, and was theatrically released worldwide by June 6. The film received negative reviews from critics, with criticism for its screenplay and lack of originality, but received some praise for its lighthearted tone. 2 Fast 2 Furious was a box office success, grossing over $236 million worldwide, making it the 17th highest-grossing film of 2003 and the then-highest grossing film in the franchise. The standalone sequel film, The Fast and the Furious: Tokyo Drift, was released in 2006. Plot In Miami, Brian O'Conner makes a living participating in illegal street races organized by his mechanic friend Tej Parker. After winning a race against drivers including Suki, the police show up and Brian is arrested. He is given a deal by his former boss FBI Agent Bilkins and U.S. Customs Agent Markham to go undercover and bring down Argentinian drug lord Carter Verone in exchange for clearing his criminal record. Brian agrees on the condition that he choose his partner. Brian heads home to Barstow, California, where he enlists the help of Roman Pearce, a childhood friend who had served jail time and is under parole. Roman agrees, but only for the same deal Brian was offered. In Miami, Agent Monica Fuentes, undercover with Verone for a year, assists them in his organization. After acquiring confiscated vehicles and being hired by Verone as his drivers, the duo returns to a Customs/FBI hideout, where Roman confronts Markham over interference with the mission. Brian informs Bilkins and Markham that Verone plans to smuggle the money into his private jet and fly off. To evade their GPS traces, Brian and Roman challenge a pair of muscle car drivers they raced earlier for pink slips. Despite engine and power output handicaps, Brian and Roman manage to win the race and the other two cars. Roman confronts Brian about his attraction to Monica and the constant threat of Verone's men, but they patch up their difference. At a nightclub, Brian and Roman witness Verone's men torturing MPD Detective Whitworth into giving his men a window of opportunity to make their getaway. The next morning, Monica warns them that they will be killed once the drop is made. Despite this, Markham refuses to call off the job, claiming that it is their one chance to catch Verone. On the day of the mission, Brian and Roman begin transporting duffel bags of Verone's money with two of Verone's men—Enrique and Roberto—riding along to watch them. Before the 15-minute window is set, Whitworth, the detective in charge, decides to call in the police to move in for the arrest, resulting in a high-speed chase across the city. The duo leads the police to a warehouse, where a "scramble" by dozens of street racers organized by Tej disorients the police. Following the scramble, the police manage to pull over the wanted cars, only to find out that they were driven by Tej and Suki. As Brian approaches the destination point in a Yenko Camaro, Enrique tells him to make a detour away from the airfield to the Tarpon Point Marina exit. Meanwhile, Roman gets tied up by Roberto by using an improvised ejector seat in his Dodge Challenger powered by nitrous oxide. At the airfield, Customs Agents have Verone's plane and convoy surrounded, only to discover they have been duped into a decoy maneuver while Verone is at a boatyard miles away. Verone reveals he knew Monica was undercover, and gave her the wrong destination point and plans to use her as leverage. When Brian arrives at the marina, Enrique prepares to kill him; Roman appears and helps incapacitate Enrique. Verone escapes aboard his private yacht, but Brian and Roman drive the Yenko Camaro off a ramp, crashing on top of it. The duo apprehend Verone and save Monica. As part of the deal, Markham clears Brian and Roman's criminal record, and in return Roman turns over the second half of Verone's cash. The duo agree to stay in Miami, and Brian suggests opening a garage—funded by a cut of Verone's cash Roman kept for themselves. Cast Main article: List of Fast & Furious characters Paul Walker as Brian O'Conner, a former Los Angeles cop who became a fugitive after letting Dominic Toretto escape in the previous film who has now settled in Miami. He drives a 1999 Nissan Skyline GTR R34 and a 2002 Mitsubishi Lancer Evolution VII. Tyrese Gibson as Roman Pearce, Brian's childhood friend who is on house arrest after serving time in prison for which he still blames Brian. He drives a 2003 Mitsubishi Eclipse Spyder GTS. Eva Mendes as Monica Fuentes, a U.S. Customs agent working undercover as Carter Verone's aide and Brian's love interest. Cole Hauser as Carter Verone, a ruthless Argentinian drug lord whose organization the Customs Service sent Monica and later Brian to infiltrate. Chris "Ludacris" Bridges as Tej Parker, a race host and a friend of Brian's. He arranges high stakes street racing events in which Brian often races and wins. James Remar as Agent Markham, a U.S. customs agent in charge of the operation against Verone and Monica's superior. Devon Aoki as Suki, a friend of Brian, Tej, and Jimmy. She is the only named female racer in the movie, and her crew is made up entirely of women. She normally drives a hot pink custom Honda S2000. Thom Barry as Agent Bilkins, who Brian first met during his undercover work in the first movie, who has come to Miami to oversee the situation. As before, he holds a grudging respect for O'Conner's driving and street racing skills. Edward Finlay as Agent Dunn, a U.S. Customs agent who is Markham's number two in the operation. Mark Boone Junior as Detective Whitworth, a Miami detective who is forced by Verone to give Pearce and O'Conner a window to deliver his package. Mo Gallini as Enrique, Verone's bald henchman. Roberto Sanchez as Roberto, Verone's henchman and Enrique's partner. MC Jin as Jimmy, a mechanic who works for Tej and is a close friend of Brian. Amaury Nolasco as Orange Julius, a street racer who drives an orange Mazda RX-7. Michael Ealy as Slap Jack, a street racer who drives a gold Toyota Supra. John Cenatiempo as Korpi, a street racer who drives a 1969 Chevrolet Camaro Yenko S/C. Eric Etebari as Darden, Korpi's friend who drives a 1970 Dodge Challenger. Producer Neal H. Moritz makes a cameo appearance as a police officer during a chase scene. Production Development Because of the incredible response to The Fast and the Furious, we knew we had struck a chord with young audiences. I believe we had tapped into a culture—the very urban world of street racing. It really resonated with our fans, who continued to support the film when it hit the streets on DVD and video—I mean, it really just exploded again, allowing even more people a chance to take the ride. We knew they were ready for another film, but only if we delivered one with the same authenticity and edge as the first. Well, we've done just that. —Producer Neal H. Moritz, on greenlighting the project sequel.[7] Plans to make a sequel came about after the box office success of The Fast and the Furious.[7] which grossed over $200 million worldwide.[4] John Singleton had seen the first film and was awed by it, saying, "When I saw The Fast and the Furious, I was like, 'Damn, why didn't I think of that?' Growing up in South Central L.A., we had street races all the time." Singleton's rave reaction of the film as well as the culture of street racing in general influenced his decision to direct the sequel. The director also claimed that the concept of street racing could be something young audiences can relate to.[7] The screenplay was written by Michael Brandt and Derek Haas, along with Gary Scott Thompson (the co-writer from the first film).[8] There were two film treatments submitted early on, one of which did not involve Vin Diesel's character in the event the actor would not return for the sequel.[9] Singleton credited Tun Gun as a major influence for the film, particularly with regard to the action sequences.[10] Pre-production Paul Walker returned as Brian O'Conner in 2 Fast 2 Furious. Vin Diesel was offered $25 million to return in the sequel as Dominic Toretto.[5] However, he refused after reading the screenplay as he felt that its potential was inferior compared to that of its predecessor; rather, he chose to appear in The Chronicles of Riddick.[11] According to Variety magazine in 2015 he was less taken with what the screenwriters had in mind for the film. "They didn't take a Francis Ford Coppola approach to it. They approached it like they did sequels in the '80s and '90s, when they would drum up a new story unrelated for the most part, and slap the same name on it." [5] However, Diesel reflected on his decision in a July 2014 report from Uproxx, saying: "I would've said, 'Don't walk away from it just because the script sucked in 2 Fast 2 Furious because there's an obligation to the audience to fight, no matter what, to make that film as good as possible.'... I might have had a little bit more patience or belief in the long-term of it." [11] Paul Walker, who had just finished Timeline at the time, reprised his role in the second picture as Brian O'Conner. Tyrese Gibson, then known mononymously as Tyrese, also became a part of the cast having previously acted in Singleton's Baby Boy, which was the singer's feature film acting debut; he portrayed Roman Pearce.[12] Ja Rule, another prominent rap artist who appeared in The Fast and the Furious, was originally tapped for the role of Tej Parker. Ja Rule was offered $500,000 for the role, which was more than what he had been paid to appear in The Fast and the Furious, $15,000. According to Singleton, "Ja got too big for himself. He turned it down. He turned down a half a million dollars... He was acting like he was too big to be in the sequel. He wouldn't return calls." The director then hired Chris "Ludacris" Bridges as a substitute.[6] Bridges would later rise to prominence for appearing in the film and star in later films such as Crash and Hustle & Flow.[13] Additional cast also included Cole Hauser as key villain Carter Verone, who appeared in Singleton's Higher Learning; Eva Mendes as undercover agent Monica Fuentes; and Devon Aoki as Suki, the sole female driver in the film.[7] Filming Principal photography began in the fall of 2002.[6] and Matthew F. Leonetti served as the director of photography.[14] Filming was done mostly in various parts of South Florida such as Miami Beach, Seven Mile Bridge, and Homestead Air Reserve Base.[7][15] Hauser's character's mansion was shot in Coral Gables, in a house owned by Sylvester Stallone.[7] A car enthusiast himself,[7] Walker drove a Nissan Skyline GT-R model R34 borrowed from the film's Technical Advisor, Craig Lieberman, in the film's opening scenes.[16] Aoki did not have a driver's license or any driving experience prior to the film's production, and took driving lessons during filming:[17] she drove a pink 2001 Honda S2000 AP1 in the film.[16] Gibson drove a convertible Mitsubishi Eclipse Spyder, while Michael Ealy drove a Toyota Supra Turbo MkIV model JZA80 that had been used by Walker in The Fast and the Furious.[16] Music Main article: 2 Fast 2 Furious (soundtrack) The musical score was composed by David Arnold. The soundtrack was released on May 27, 2003 on Def Jam Recordings, the same record label that Ludacris was signed to. Release Box office 2 Fast 2 Furious earned $52.1 million in its U.S. opening in 3,408 theaters, ranking first for the weekend, taking the number #1 spot off of Finding Nemo. It went on to score the fourth-highest June opening weekend, behind Batman Forever, Scooby Doo and Austin Powers: The Spy Who Shagged Me.[18] In its 133 days in release, the film reached a peak release of 3,418 theaters in the U.S. and earned $127.2 million in domestically. The film had the 15th largest US gross of 2003 and the 16th largest worldwide gross of 2003, combined with the international gross of $109.2 million, the film earned $236.4 million worldwide.[3] Critical response On Rotten Tomatoes, 2 Fast 2 Furious has an approval rating of 36% based on 160 reviews and an average rating of 4.7/5/10. The site's critical consensus reads: "Beautiful people and beautiful cars in a movie that won't take the brain cells." [19] On Metacritic it has a weighted average score of 38 out of 100, based on reviews from 36 critics, indicating "generally unfavorable reviews".[20] Audiences surveyed by CinemaScore gave the film an average grade of "A–" on scale of A+ to F.[21] Todd McCarthy of Variety magazine wrote: "While this John Singleton-directed sequel provides a breezy enough joyride, it lacks the unassuming freshness and appealing neighborhood feel of the economy-priced original." [22] Scott Tobias of The A.V. Club wrote: "Singleton abandons the underground racing subculture that gave the first film its allure, relying instead on lazy thriller plotting that's only a bag of donuts and a freeze-frame away from the average TV cop show." [23] USA Today's Mike Clark gave film 2 out of 4, and wrote "The movie is all about racing, and character be damned, though the still dazed-looking Walker and Tyrese finally get a little rapport going after a worn-out story's very rocky start." He concludes "Lack of pretension helps the viewer get over the fact that this is just another retreat." [24] Roger Ebert of the Chicago Sun-Times gave the film 3 out of 4 and said, "It doesn't have a brain in its head, but it is fast and furious." [25] In 2018, Derek Lawrence of the Entertainment Weekly called it "the forgotten Fast and Furious gem" and praised the chemistry between Walker and Gibson and John Singleton's direction [26] In 2019, Bilge Ebert of Vulture also praised the movie especially Singleton's direction.[27] Accolades Award Category Nominee Result MTV Movie Award Breakthrough Male Ludacris Nominated Golden Raspberry Awards Worst Remake or Sequel 2 Fast 2 Furious Nominated Worst Excuse for an Actual Movie (All Concept/No Content) 2 Fast 2 Furious Nominated Teen Choice Awards Choice Breakout Movie Actor Michael Ealy Nominated Choice Movie Chemistry Paul Walker Won Choice Movie Fight/Action Sequence Paul Walker vs. Tyrese Gibson Won Choice Summer Movie 2 Fast 2 Furious Nominated References ^ a b c d "2 Fast 2 Furious (2003)".
